Program Overview:
Nursing home administrators and others engaged in the management of nursing homes are consistently faced with complex, challenging and changing operational, clinical and legal situations that require a firm understanding of business and clinical ethics as well as federal and state compliance mandates. NJHA and LeadingAge NJ have partnered with the law firm of Epstein Becker and Green, the NJ Office of the Long Term Care Ombudsman and National Quality Partners to offer this program that will satisfy the four hours of ethics content for administrator licensure.

It will focus on the corporate compliance and ethics provisions of the final nursing home requirements of participation, federal fraud and abuse laws and regulations, anti-kickback and office of inspector general guidance related to new business relationships, identifying and investigating negligence, elder abuse and financial exploitation, using POLST appropriately and transforming advanced illness care.

Objectives:

1. Learning the path to compliance with the corporate compliance provisions of the final nursing home requirements of participation published in 2016.
2. Understanding the risks inherent in even unintentional non-compliance with federal fraud and abuse laws and regulations, and how a facility can navigate the risks and ensure it is making the correct operational, financial and strategic decisions.
3. Understanding the risks under the anti-kickback and OIG guidance in topics ranging from swapping to joint ventures to relationships with hospitals and navigating the legal requirement to do voluntary refunds/disclosures under the federal 60-day rule.
4. Identifying negligence and understanding the signs of elder abuse and financial exploitation.
5. Learning how to appropriately use the POLST in nursing homes compared to the appropriate use of other advance directives.
6. Enhancing the nursing home’s role in transforming advanced illness care.

Target Audience:
Nursing home administrators, compliance officers, risk managers, finance staff, department heads and clinical managers.
